A Middle Aged Courtship

By ANDREW C. EWING

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I was thirty-five years old and becoming tired of myself. The summer was coming on, and I went to the seashore, thinking that I might shake off ennui.

There were boys and girls at the hotel who excited my envy by the friendly way or the loverlike way or any kind of a way they mingled.

There was a young woman apparently a year or two past thirty who, on my arrival at the hotel, seemed to regard me with something more than an ordinary interest. She was sitting on the porch as I entered the house and fixed her eyes upon me with a peculiar expression. I would have liked to believe—as I would have believed ten or fifteen years before—that I had made an instantaneous conquest, but that day was past. I simply inferred that there was something about me that reminded her of some one she knew or had known. I had no remembrance of ever having met her before.

The next morning I joined a group of ladies commonly called the knitting brigade sitting on the porch, and Miss Brown, the lady I have mentioned, being among the number I was introduced to her. "Drawing a chair beside hers, I entered into conversation with her. She had the faculty of placing a man on unconventional terms with her at once, a valuable gift in a woman—that is, whenever she cares to exercise it—and I felt at once as free with her as if I had known her for years. The other ladies one by one withdrew and left Miss Brown and me by ourselves. We chatted till luncheon was announced and wondered what had become of the morning.

That was the beginning of it. There was nothing between us that could be called a flirtation. We had passed that age. We simply found companionship in each other and spent much of our time together, or, rather, all our time that we were not in our rooms. Miss Brown treated me not as a stranger, but as one she had known a long while. Every now and again she would indicate that there was or had been at some previous time something between us, but gave out nothing that I could get hold of—nothing that I could even question her about. So we drifted from day to day, I every now and again running up against this vague something she seemed to have on her mind.

And here I will remark that there are circumstances, episodes, happenings—call them what you like—that a man will forget, but a woman will remember so long as she lives. It is the large things that interest a man—his career, the interests of his country or those questions which pertain to the ongoing of the world. A woman will treasure a note, a button, anything connected with some scene or person near to her heart.

Finding Miss Brown companionable, it occurred to me that here might be a chance for me to get away from my lonely bachelorhood, to exchange club life for home life, to settle myself for the rest of my days. Whether I could do so was very easy to discover. All that was needed was for me to propose to Miss Brown.

But here was a difficulty. When I was a young man I could make love for fun, as I regarded it, by the hour. I knew a flirt by instinct, or thought I did, and there were no boundaries with such to my lovemaking. But now in middle age to do the same thing, and do it seriously, seemed impossible. In vain I attempted to say something "soft" to her. The words wouldn't come out. And how could I propose "in cold blood"? There must be some approach to a declaration of love coupled with an invitation to the woman to be my wife.

By dint of perseverance I managed to bring forth several hints as to what was coming. Then, having prepared the lady, the next thing was to make the proposition. I took her out for a long walk on the beach, hoping to gain inspiration from what the waves were saying. The waves seemed to say, "You old baldheaded coot, what sort of a fellow are you to tell a middle aged woman you love her?" I kept her on her feet for two hours vainly trying to screw up my courage to the required point. The worst of it was that I knew she was aware of what I was endeavoring to bring out and was getting tired of waiting for it—not only tired mentally, but bodily, especially in her legs. But I couldn't do it. I marched her back to the hotel.

I made several more unsuccessful attempts, but finally while we were sitting in a corner of the piazza by ourselves, with no one about, I made a final attempt and won. Then I listened breathless for a reply.

"You are not as glib at this sort of thing," she said, "as you were fourteen years ago."

I started. "What do you mean," I asked.

"Don't you remember sitting in the moonlight at another hotel just before returning to college for your last year there proposing to a girl?"

"What name?"

"Madge Brown."

"The flirt of the White mountains, so called?"

"Yes."

She unclasped a locket she wore on her neck and showed me some plaited strands of hair.

"Whose is it?" I asked.

"Yours."

For the Buffalo Carpet Moth

The little insect commonly called the Carpet moth or Buffalo beetle is very destructive to carpets, but if watched, damage by it can easily be prevented.

A gentleman in the western part of Pennsylvania recently wrote to State Zoologist, H. A. Surface, of Harrisburg, stating that he had just moved into a house where they found specimens of a certain insect, which were enclosed with the letter. He asked for information concerning it, and the reply of Professor Surface was as follows:

"The specimen of insect sent from your house is the Buffalo moth, or, in other words, it is the larva of a beetle known as the 'Carpet beetle.' It feeds on various kinds of woolen goods, but especially on the nap of carpets. The best thing to do is to scrub the floors of your rooms with water containing five per cent. creolin. Then spray the edges of the carpets with an alcoholic solution of corrosive sublimate. Spray the carpets under furniture with this material, as it is there that the pests are generally most destructive. It is also desirable to use rugs instead of carpets, and take these out into the sun and air, and beat them occasionally.

However, if one does not care to go to the trouble of discarding their carpets for the sake of rugs, they can nevertheless easily control such pests. Watch and occasionally remove furniture to one side, and see if the carpets where the furniture rested are being damaged. If it is evident that the piling or woolen fibres are being eaten away, and especially if rows of bare threads are exposed anywhere in the carpet, this is evidence that this pest is at work.

The thing to do is to spread a wet towel over the carpet as it lies on the floor, and iron this with a very hot iron, in order to drive the scalding steam down through the carpets, and thus kill the pests."

The Murderous Hatpin

In nearly every state and in most large cities efforts have been made to pass laws against the using of long hatpins. The fatalities from these instruments have been many and serious. They have put out eyes, scratched faces, made dangerous wounds, and added a new terror to life. The inclination has been to ridicule any effort to regulate them, because fair woman is supposed to be allowed to do anything or to wear anything that fashion may impose upon her. But this is a real terror, and it is to be regretted that solemn reformers have not been able to handle it with better results. In Prussia they do things more successfully. The managers of the railways have ordered their officials to request women wearing these weapons to remove them, and if they refuse they shall not be permitted to ride on trains, and shall be compelled to leave the station. Moreover, the hatpin wearers will be liable to fines. Those who have traveled in Prussia have no desire to see all their laws transferred to the United States, but it might be well to have a few Prussian officials handle the hatpin problem for us.—"The World About Us," in The Ladies' World for September.

Common Colds Must be Taken Seriously

For unless cured they sap the vitality and lower the vital resistance to more serious infection. PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

In this issue of The Gazette the proposed amendments to the constitution of Pennsylvania are published. They are published free of charge and will appear but once, as the state officials select only Republican papers in this county to publish proposed amendments "officially," and those papers of the "local annex" of the Penrose machine are to print them 14 times, which will mean a couple hundred dollars apiece.

Do these patriotic(?) officials at Harrisburg hope to keep the Democracy of the state in the dark? or do they merely want to encourage gang organs to "keep in line."

A PITIFUL WAIL

One of our contemporaries raises a faint protest against the fusion movement which is rapidly gaining ground in this county. We do not wonder that it is distasteful to our neighbor, for if such a movement wins it will mean that the rustle of the leaves when the political plum tree is shaken will no longer sound pleasant in the ears of papers that profited by an Act of the Legislature which sought to silence all opposition to the Republican machine of the state and its annex in this county; for the tree will no more shake; neither will they be permitted to print ballots at their own price and then furnish them in illegal form to save press running.

Just now they are reaping one harvest of their "loyalty to party" in being chosen to publish the proposed amendments to the state constitution in fourteen issues, but they, sooner or later, will be called upon to "pay the price" by using their influence for the perpetuity of that discredited state gang and its local annex, as they did when they tried to persuade the voters to approve that now notorious seventh proposed amendment of a couple years ago, which would have made even election officers appointive in this state, and that by a power not mentioned.

Is it any wonder that men of all parties who believe in a square deal and who believe that when a man is elected to public office it is his duty to serve the whole people and not only his party and his party organs, are banding together to combat a gang in Pennsylvania that passes laws without the necessary votes in the Legislature and creates offices to "keep in line" the ward heelers of the state? Is it to be wondered at, when political debts are paid by filling important posts with men whose only recommendation is their record of "vote getting," the means not being taken into consideration?

It is time to call a halt; what we need is to have our county offices filled by men who will not cringe before the fiery gaze of the local mogul, nor will the thud of his fist upon the table swerve them from doing their duty to all citizens.

Yes, we favor this move, though our neighbor use the word "mongrel" to designate those connected with it. The Gazette could not be bought nor could threats of taking away all possible legal printing cause us to let up in our course of telling the truth about conditions in this county; neither did the Act of the Legislature, passed especially to put us out of business, have the desired effect, for we still live and are free.

The fusion movement surrenders no office for which any Democrat was willing to announce before the arrangement was made, hence no

Democrat can honestly claim to have been kept off the ticket nor in any way interfered with in the exercise of his privileges. Nor have Keystone or Prohibition candidates announced for any of the offices for which Democrats had announced. Victory is in sight if the combined forces stand firm and the November election will bring to an end in this county the power and influence of a boss that breaks alike "political promises and personal pledges," though he has directed newspapers, dictated to officers, named postmasters and now sits in a post of honor—at the right hand of Governor Tener.

Who Shall Repair It?

Editor of The Gazette,

Dear Sir:—While this little item may not be of much interest to some, to others it means a great deal. The foot bridge leading to the North Side is in a very bad condition. The handrails, together with the flooring, are practically rotted away; in fact, the entire woodwork is gone as far as safety in crossing it is concerned.

I believe this useful little structure was originally built by subscription. Now, the question arises, to whom does it belong, who should keep it in repair? or who should pay damages if there should be any? The school children and employees on both sides use it; in fact, all who wish to save a half mile's walk to the iron bridge are greatly interested.

Will the borough council take it as part of the borough property and put it in repair, or must it be closed up? As you and your paper take a great interest in the advancement and welfare of the town, and its people, please give us your opinion as to its usefulness and who should keep an eye on its condition. The cables and iron work appear in good condition and well worth new woodwork.

The value of this bridge to many is well known and its condition is deplorable and dangerous. The borough, we think, should repair it.

Amateur photographers, if you have a good film you would like to have enlarged, bring it to the McCrory Studio. We also do finishing at reasonable prices.

The Two Masters

All the people in the world are serving under one of two great masters and no man can serve both. These two masters are the Devil and Jesus. If we take the letters that spell their name we can see clearly how these two masters treat those who serve them. The first master we shall notice is the Devil, then Jesus.

D—deceives people ever since the fall.

E—exhausts those in his service.

V—vanquishes them completely.

I—instigates all the evil in the world.

L—lies, he is the father of lies.

J—justifies all who truly serve Him.

E—exalts sinners and makes them new creatures.

S—sanctifies, makes clean and pure.

U—unites earth with heaven.

S—saves from sin and eternal death.

Making Meeting Equal.

One day a distinguished notary while breakfasting with a friend at a cafe in Paris indulged in some stinging comments on the public acts of Marshal Marmont. Suddenly another gentleman, dining at another table, arose and approached them, his mustache bristling with anger. "Sir," cried he tragically, "you shall give me satisfaction!" Are you Marshal Marmont?" quickly asked the notary. "I have not that honor," was the indignant reply, "but I am his chief aide-de-camp." "Give me your card then, sir," said the notary, "I will send you my head clerk."

"Yes-Yes!"

It Sounded Better After Nearly Losing It

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Elizabeth Gray returned to Elmwood after a year spent with an uncle in a distant city, she found few changes in the quiet village. The morning after her arrival she lay contentedly in the slant roofed little room that had been hers since childhood and listened to the familiar music of hammer and saw from the distant shipyards.

Just then wood smoke reminded her that her mother was getting breakfast in the kitchen and with a pricking of remorse at her slothfulness, Elizabeth arose and dressed.

"I thought the waffles would arouse you, Bess," smiled her mother, as the girl entered the kitchen, flushed and sparkling. "Here is the first batch—take them in and begin your breakfast. I—"

"Mother mine!" scolded Elizabeth, leading the rosy cheeked, plump little woman into the dining room. "Sit right down and eat breakfast with dad. I shall cook waffles for both of you. Not a word!"

She smiled back at the two loving faces as she passed to and fro from kitchen to dining room ministering to their wants.

"We can't expect to keep her with us always," sighed her mother. "This last year without her has shown me how dreary it will be for us when—somebody takes her away."

"By 'somebody' I suppose you mean Norman," boomed Mr. Gray's deep voice. "I don't know as there's another man in Elmwood, to say nothing of the outside world, that I'd rather give my little Bess to than Norman Ryder. Perhaps she has met somebody else in the city—you can't tell—and Norman's only country bred. Bess probably met some fine dandified chaps in New York."

"I'd rather it would be Norman," insisted Mrs. Gray, with a little frightened flutter in her voice that went straight to Elizabeth's heart. "I couldn't bear to have Bess marry anybody from the city. We might not see her from one year's end to the other."

Elizabeth hastened into the dining room with a plate of waffles scorched to a crisp and her fair face flushed and agitated.

"I've heard every word you said," she confessed between tears and laughter. "Dears, I'm not going to marry anybody. I haven't seen any one in New York that could tempt me away from you."

Mr. Gray squeezed the little hand she had laid in his broad palm and looked quizzically into her blue eyes.

"How about anybody in Elmwood, Bess?" he asked.

"I don't want to marry anybody," flashed Elizabeth tearfully. "I want to stay right here all my life." That evening Norman Ryder drove over to see Elizabeth Gray, and such is the contrariness of womankind, that he who had always found favor in her eyes, now appeared to be awkward and provincial in manner and speech, as compared to the showy youths she had met when visiting her uncle. Although he was bigger and broader and handsomer than any of the city bred youths, almost the first words he uttered seemed to place him in a different class.

"So you knew I had returned Norman?" she asked, withdrawing her hands from his close grasp.

"Yes, yes!" he had cried delightedly, and it was that characteristic double affirmative uttered with a slight twang that drew a thin veil of discord between them. There was something about the expression that smacked strongly of the rustic, that, with the twang and the equally favored double negative, "No no!" seemed to place Norman Ryder among the farmers and dairymen who formed the community about Elmwood.

Elizabeth hated herself for shuddering every time Norman spoke with a twang, but she couldn't help it. She was angry with him for speaking so—her father did not, nor did any of their neighbors. It was carelessness on Norman's part, and it grated on her sensibilities.

"I thought perhaps you'd answer my letters," he said rather ruefully, as he drew his chair near the glowing stove. "But I expect you were pretty busy studying your music. I'm going to ask you to play some of your classical pieces for me by and by."

"Of course I will," said Elizabeth. "I didn't write to anybody here except father and mother, and they said—"

"I guess they said I came over here most every night while you were gone!" he grinned happily. "They let me read your letters—and that was next best to getting 'em myself."

"I didn't promise you I'd write," protested Elizabeth, rather stiffly.

"No, no!" he uttered quickly, exonerating her from blame. "But—but—I kind of thought you might answer one of 'em, and so I kept on writing."

"I was glad to hear from you, and I suppose it was mean of me never to answer any of them, but did mother give you the messages I sent?"

her ear she winced, and after awhile she grew to counting the times he said "Yes, yes!" and "No, no!" If he would only break himself of using those expressions. But of course he could not know how they sounded. Everybody in Elmwood used them except a few persons like the minister and the doctor and lawyer and her own father. Outsiders laughed and called it part of the dialect of Bufum county.

When Elizabeth asked him if she should play for him Norman said "Yes, yes!" and when she asked if he had had enough music he cried hastily "No, no!" until her nerves were all a-jangle.

At last he arose to go, and there was a very tender look in his down bent eyes as he fingered his hat. "There was something I wanted to say to you, Bess. I wonder if I better say it now? I guess you know what it is." He looked steadily at her.

Elizabeth did not hesitate. She was angry with him for his rustic ways and provoked at herself because she was too narrow minded to overlook them.

"I don't believe you better say it," she said deliberately, her eyes on the small shoe that tapped the carpet.

His face whitened underneath the bronze, and there was a stricken look in his eyes. "I hardly dared to hope much since I heard you were coming home, but before you went away"—He choked a little and asked her a question, "Will you tell me why, Bess?"

She looked up at him with a strange hardness in her heart. "Do you really want me to tell you?" she asked.

"Yes, yes!" he said eagerly. "That's it, Norman Ryder!" she flashed. "It's your Bufum county twang and your everlasting 'yes-yes' and 'no-no,' and you know better too!"

He stared at her, bewildered for a moment, and as the import of her words struck home he reddened deeply and all the tenderness fled from his eyes. "So that's the reason?" he said gratingly. "Well, Bess, there's no chance for me, then, because if you don't love me enough to overlook a mere habit of speech you don't love me as much as I want you to. I suppose I don't shine very brightly compared with the city fellows you've met, but I've loved you better than anybody else in the world ever could." He crammed on his hat and without another word left the house.

Elizabeth stood alone in the parlor, her eyes fixed in a frightened stare on the closed door, her heart pounding in unison with Norman's departing steps on the crisp snow.

It was bright moonlight, and scores of young people were coasting down the steep hill that ran past the Grays' home. Elizabeth heard their shouts of laughter and the frequent warning cry of "Road!"

The gate crashed into place behind Norman's impatient swing. There was the roar of a coming bobsled, a muffled thud and then shouts of distress. Elizabeth reached the front gate at the same time her father and mother hurried to the same place, drawn by the sounds of an accident.

Somebody had been run down by the bobsled—somebody who lay, a dark motionless figure against the whiteness of the snow. Around his head the snow was stained a crimson that widened and widened horribly.

It was Norman Ryder, and when Elizabeth reached his side a little group of men were lifting him from the snow.

"Bring him into my house," commanded Mr. Gray, leading the way, and so they carried him across the doorstep which he had left in anger a few moments before and bore him upstairs to the front chamber.

A doctor was summoned, and while Mrs. Gray prepared bandages and other necessities her husband built a roaring fire in the fireplace, and Elizabeth sat cold and numb beside that still form on the bed. Her hands rigidly held in place the bag of ice her mother laid on his forehead above the bandage that covered the deep cut. Her eyes were fixed on the white set features and closed lids and the finely chiseled lips which might part no more to utter the homely dialect of the country which she had despised and ridiculed.

She could not weep. She could only sit there, a miserable heartbroken little house, hating herself for her censorious words.

The doctor came and waved her aside. For an hour he worked over the young man, while Elizabeth sat in her own room breathless and despairing. Then at last she heard him going away, and instantly she was at the door of Norman's room. Her mother smilingly beckoned her within and left them alone together.

Norman, looking very pale, his head swathed in bandages, did not see her come in. For a moment she stood there looking down at him with her heart in her eyes.

Suddenly he looked up at her, smiling whimsically in the old way, as he had been used to do before she told him the unpleasant truths. He had looked that way when he was a boy growing up and she was a little girl trotting to school beside him.

"Doctor says I'll be all right in a day or so," he smiled. "But I'll have to keep still. You don't mind my being here in your house, do you, Bess?"

"No, no!" she cried, dropping unconsciously into the vernacular of Bufum county. She slipped to her knees beside the bed and leaned her sunny head against his shoulder.

Norman quivered and then laid one hand on her head. "Oh, Bess! You don't mean it! Do you love me?" he whispered.

"Yes, yes!" sobbed Elizabeth. And to them both it was the sweetest word in the world.

WHY LATE HATCHES OFTEN FAIL

There are reasons why late hatches are often small and the chicks hard to raise, and we give them here for the information of those who have been unsuccessful.

Eggs are often incubated from breeders that are about exhausted from the exactions of months in the breeding pens and eggs that do hatch give weak chicks. This condition is often met by fanciers by mating hens that have rested while hatching and brooding chicks to males that have been kept in reserve in celibacy. Eggs are often collected carelessly or stored in a warm place. The hot henhouse, the broody hen, the warm or musty place where eggs are stored are detrimental and affect the hatchability of eggs as well as the vigor of the embryos.

ALFALFA, SHADE, IDEAL FOR LATE CHICKS

Many are not particular as to the breed from which they select eggs for late hatching. Late chicks from big breeds cannot mature to bring any profit in winter, and these chicks, so slow to grow, often get rumpy at the first frost and are a menace to the flock.

Smaller breeds are best for late hatching, as they mature quickly and often come round in time to swell the winter profits, the big breeds paying better for soft roasters from February to April.

Late chicks often get poor care. They are no novelty and aren't received with the enthusiasm that greeted the first peeps. They are thus often placed on fouled ground, cleaned of every eatable thing, are housed in dirty, lousy coops and kept with older flocks that bully them out of their feed.

Like, that multiply so fast in the heat, are allowed to roost in them, and with crowding, poor ventilation, lack of shade and fresh water they are up against it.

Allowance is not made for the fact that heat requires a change of ration, that corn should not be fed so freely, that feed should not be so abundant, but cooling and digestible, and that meat must be supplied to substitute for insect life that has disappeared.

This little story is the result of our observation of conditions where late hatches were generally poor and few of the chicks were raised and we think mainly explains why late hatches often result in failure.

DON'TS.

Don't count your prize winners before they have won the cups.

Don't strain at a hen loose and swallow a skyscraper. The sins that other folks commit, compared to yours, may look like nil.

Don't substitute dry ground bone for green cut bone when it is only lime and green bone, with 15 per cent ash, 15 per cent protein and 23 per cent fat, maybe cut yourself at half the price.

LORE OF THE WEDDING RING

Puritans Vainly Sought to Abolish the Emblem—Diamond Best for Betrothal Ring.

According to the ancient ritual in marriage the husband began the ring business by placing it upon the bride's thumb and putting it up cressively on the next two fingers, pronouncing for each one a personal trinity, with a final amen when the fourth finger was reached, and there the ring remained. The Greek church ritual directs that the ring be placed upon the right hand. Puritans vainly sought to abolish the ring as a vain and heathen emblem, but the sweet old fashion of giving and taking the emblem "for our love's sake" yet remains to us.

Betrothal or engagement rings vary in fashion nowadays, and always depend, or should, upon the purse of the donor. Where there are no limitations of this sort his taste, if it be perfect, will lead him to choose the diamond solitaire, and of the best he can afford, a small and pure blue-white stone being altogether preferable to a large stone. Some prefer a ring set with three stones—generally a sapphire set between two diamonds. Others select a ruby or an emerald, which signifies promise of happiness.

Few persons choose pearls for an engagement ring, as pearls are supposed to typify tears. They are also too perishable to become emblems of love, which, in its first glow, at least, is understood to be indestructible. Their beauty is very precarious, being dimmed, or "aged," as the lapidary expresses it, by contact with impure air, while acid annihilates them completely.

PAID TO PLAY WITH JIMMY

Lad Explains How He and His Little Mate Earned Ten Cents Apiece.

The Higgins family was gathered about the supper table, and Mr. Higgins was engaged in serving the cold ham on the pile of waiting plates. He interrupted that process long enough to address one of his young sons.

"Edward," he said, "didn't I hear you say that Jimmy Fanning was so disagreeable and quarrelsome that you were not going to play with him any more?"

"Yes, father."

"And didn't you say that all the boys at your school said the same thing?"

"Yes, father."

"How did it happen, then, that when I came home tonight I saw you and Billy and John Heald and a lot more youngsters over in the Fannings' yard?"

"Well, you see, father, we were all over to the Bacons', and Mr. Fanning came over and said he knew we didn't like to play with Jimmy, but he would give us ten cents apiece if we would go over there this afternoon and play. He says he'll give any of us a dime any time we'll come over and spend the afternoon with Jimmy."

Mr. Higgins looked incredulous till his son dug into his pocket and produced a bright, new ten-cent piece as corroborative evidence. Then he looked at his wife and smiled.

"It's a good thing Jimmy's father is well-to-do," he said. "Did you have a pleasant afternoon, Edward?"

"Well, we earned the money, all right," said Edward.—Youth's Companion.

NOT A SUBJECT FOR PITY

Little Boss of the School Made Careful Inquiry and Then Acted Promptly.

A suburban youngster who has long been the boss of his neighborhood has been attending, temporarily, a school connected with an orphanage. Very nearly all the pupils are dependents.

The school has a dozen bright red chairs which are greatly fancied by the boys, and there is either a general scramble for them or else the boys who live in the asylum are in them first.

This particular outsider was not to be denied when all the chairs were filled, and with his superior strength and courage would dump one of the occupants before the teacher arrived. Her attention was called to this and the small bully was told that he should have a feeling of pity for the unfortunate.

The next day he found all the chairs filled, one by a new pupil. He went to him and said:

"Have you a home?"

"Yes."

"A good home?"

"Yes."

"Father and mother?"

"Yes."

"Have you always had a father and mother?"

"Yes."

"Well, get out of my chair," and the intruder was hurled against the wall.—Chicago Evening Post.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XI.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 10, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Dan. i, 8-20—Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, Rom. xiv, 21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The study of prophecy should be to every child of God most fascinatingly attractive, for "to Him give all the prophets witness," and "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Acts x, 43; Rev. xix, 10). The Lord has told the prophets all that He intends to do, and prophecy is therefore a light in a dark place to show us the way we are going (Amos iii, 7; II Pet. i, 19-21). Our blessed Lord is just the same as when on the way to Emmaus, and the same evening in the midst of the disciples He opened to them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself (Luke xxiv, 25-27, 44-46), and He still loves to do so.

In one of His discourses He mentioned the prophet Daniel, and the prophet Ezekiel also mentions him by name (Matt. xxiv, 15; Ezek. xiv, 14). Ezekiel and Daniel were both among the captives in Babylon for their good and the good of others (Jer. xxv, 4-7). They were the Lord's messengers, and in them was seen the wisdom and power of the true and living God as contrasted with the wisdom of this world. I find it helpful to my own soul to watch God working and to remember that He is as ready now to work for His glory in those who are wholly His as were Daniel and his friends.

Notice in verses 2, 9, 17, of our lesson chapter that it was the Lord who gave the king of Judah into the hands of the king of Babylon. He also brought Daniel into favor with the prince of the eunuchs and gave to him and his friends knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom. "Whatsoever the Lord pleased that did He." "He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth." "He worketh all things after the counsel of His own will" (Ps. cxxxv, 6; Eph. i, 11).

These young men were chosen to stand before the king of Babylon (verse 5), but they never forgot that they always stood before a much greater King, even the Lord, the King of Israel (Zeph. iii, 15). Their beautiful names signifying God is my judge, Jehovah is gracious, who is as God is, Jehovah my keeper, might be covered by idolatrous names, but what men might call them did not affect their standing before God.

Even in the matter of eating and drinking we are to glorify God and not be conformed to the age in which we live (I Cor. x, 31; Rom. xii, 1, 2), so Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with food offered to idols (verse 8). In this matter God wrought for them, not only giving them favor with those set over them, but also causing them to thrive better on their plain food than did the others who ate the portion of the king's meat (verses 9, 14, 15).

It is not so much the food we eat, either as to quantity or quality, as the blessing of God upon it. On one occasion our Lord taught that "not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man," and so Paul wrote, "I know and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus that there is nothing unclean of itself" (Matt. xv, 11; Rom. xiv, 14). Ordinarily we are to eat what is set before us, asking no questions, but in Daniel's case it was a matter of sanctioning idolatry or standing for the true God, and when with us under any circumstances it becomes a question of God or the devil there is one thing to do. We cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of demons (I Cor. x, 21).

We are not to imagine that God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom (verse 17) apart from study on their part, whether it was the wisdom of Egypt or the wisdom from above, which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated (Jas. iii, 17). Some of us can almost imagine with what relief and joy they would turn from the books of Egypt to the book of the law of the Lord and how there would be fulfilled to them, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." The natural man can grasp the wisdom of this world, but the things of God knoweth no man, but the spirit of God. In his understanding of visions and dreams also he would doubtless profit by the experience of Joseph and the ability given to him and to others.

With what sublime confidence in God he said to the king in connection with his first dream that if time was granted to him he would show the interpretation and how gloriously God honored his faith by revealing to him the secret in a vision of the night (chapter ii, 18-19). See in chapter ii, 28, 29, 47, how he honored God, who revealed to him the secret, and how because of this the king honored God also as the God of gods and a Lord of kings.

So God was glorified in Daniel. "And Daniel continued" (verse 21). There is a most profitable meditation in those words, and we are reminded of Acts xxvi, 22, "Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day." Paul believed Moses and the prophets just as Daniel did, and in Dan. ix, 2, he tells us that he had been studying the word of the Lord by Jeremiah, the prophet.

Mt. Lake Park, Md., September 3.—Although this is an after-season for the Camp Meetings, Chautauqua and other gatherings here, the after-season Convention of the International Bible Students now in session outshines all the in-season Assemblies of many years. The program is an extensive one.

During the ten days of the Convention addresses will be given by sixty ministers and instructors of the Association. The teachings are interdenominational, unsectarian. Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle, and now also of London Tabernacle, is the President of the Association. His was the principal address of today. The auditorium was crowded. Probably in compliment to Methodists, Pastor Russell took for his text what he claimed was John Wesley's favorite—"And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (Revelation xlii, 17). He said:

What Wesley Could Not Believe

Our Methodist friends who own this spacious Auditorium have generally forgotten the special teachings of Brother Wesley, which brought them to the front of his denomination at a time when Calvin's theory of the election of saints to glory and the predestination of all others to eternal torture was the basic thought of Protestantism. Brother Wesley's voice rang out clear and full—"I cannot believe that God predestined to eternal torture the masses of mankind before they were born. I must believe that God is Love and that His love and His justice would give to every sinner a full opportunity for return to Divine favor and to everlasting life through Christ. Brother Calvin, indeed, has certain Scriptures difficult to apply, respecting election and the elect, but I have one Scripture at least which tells of a freedom of Divine grace. The 'river of the water of life' is not declared to be for the elect, but for 'whosoever will.' I take my stand upon that text."

Brother Wesley's battle-cry—"God is Love and will surely give every member of Adam's race an opportunity for eternal life through Christ"—has come ringing down to our day. And although Christians have become sick and tired of their endeavor to harmonize the doctrines of Election and Free Grace and are now trying to forget doctrines altogether, nevertheless John Wesley's theory has overwhelmed John Calvin's. The vast majority of Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists, etc., professing Calvin's tenets, really believe Wesley's—that God is Love and will surely give every member of our race a full opportunity for salvation, and that He predestinated none of them to eternal torture.

Truth in Both Theories

There are elements of truth in both theories, as we now see: "The path of the just is as the shining light, which shineth more and more—unto the perfect day." We are nearing the perfect day, and hence should understand the Bible better than did our forefathers, who did not have the wonderful Bibles Christians now possess, with marginal references, concordances and other helps! Ability to read also is universal today. Oh, what manner of Bible students we should be! Many Christians, however, discouraged by the inconsistent-

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Bedford People.

There are days of dizziness; Spells of headache, sideache, backache; Sometimes rheumatic pains; Often urinary disorders. All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick. Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Can Bedford residents doubt this statement? Mrs. C. Weyant, Clarence Street, Hyndman, Pa., says: "I was in poor health for some time and I now think it was due to inactive kidneys. Chills and dizzy spells annoyed me and I suffered a great deal from pains in my back. My husband finally procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I commenced their use. The first few doses brought great relief and it was only a short time before I was in the best of health." (Statement given October 12, 1907.)

A Lasting Effect

When Mrs. Weyant was interviewed on November 16, 1909, she said: "The cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected in my case has been permanent. You are at liberty to use my statement at any time you wish." cies and contradictions of the various creeds, Catholic and Protestant, have abandoned their creeds and abandoned their Bibles also, erroneously believing the latter to be the basis of the former. We must not share this mistake. While doing all in our power to remove all the creed fences which divide God's people into sects and parties, let us hold fast to the Bible, the most wonderful Book in the world. It is only beginning to be understood; its true light is shining today as never before. We are in the time mentioned by the Prophet, when the "wise shall understand" (Daniel xii, 10).

Brother Calvin was right in part—to the extent that he was in harmony with the Bible, which teaches us to strive to fulfil our Covenant with the Lord, that thus we may "make" our calling and election sure. It does not teach the predestination which Calvin taught and which Wesley objected to—the predestination of the wicked to an eternity of torture. The only predestination mentioned in the Bible is connected with the Church, the saints. God predestinated that none could be of the Church class, the Bride class, except such as would become copies of His Son, the Redeemer. That predestination stands unalterable, but it has no effect upon others than the elect. It merely says that none except the saints shall participate in the election. It says not one word about the fate of the non-elect. Read Romans viii, 28-30 and you will see this for yourself. To this, the Scriptural predestination, none can object. It is the unscriptural deductions which have caused us difficulty.

Brother Wesley was in exact accord with the Bible in his declaration that every member of our race must have a share in the grace of God in Christ. However, what Brother Wesley did not see was that the great Plan of the Ages is not confined to one century nor to one Age. He did not see that, while this Gospel Age is exclusively devoted to the selection of the Church class, invited to be "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," there is a coming Age in which Christ and His glorified Bride will extend Divine mercy to the non-elect.

The Key to the Mystery

is expressed in the Apostle's words, "in due time." Our great Creator need not be in haste. He has all eternity before Him. He allowed four thousand years to pass before He sent His Son to redeem the world and He has since taken nearly two thousand years in the selection of our Lord's elect Bride. He has appointed an additional thousand in which Jesus and His Bride, the glorified Church, will establish a reign of righteousness in the earth for the overthrow of sin and the uplifting of the sinners. Socially? Yes. Physically? Yes. Morally? Yes. Intellectually? Yes. Out of sin and death? Yes! Back to harmony with God if they will? Yes! No freer grace is imaginable than that which the Almighty has provided through the Savior. Of it St. Paul declares, "God wills to have all men to be saved and to be brought to a knowledge of the Truth." To this end He has appointed one Mediator, "who gave Himself a Ransom for all, to be testified in due time" (I Timothy ii, 4-6).

The "due time" for the Gospel call dates from Pentecost. But it is not a call for the world, but for a special class, the Bride class, to walk sacrificially in the footsteps of Jesus and to gain the great reward of joint-heirship with Him in His Kingdom. The "due time" for this work will soon be at an end—when the last probationary member of the Church shall have made his calling and election sure and when the "door into the marriage" shall shut. But the due time for the masses of mankind to hear of His grace and to respond thereto is still future, as Brother Wesley's favorite text will show us.

Before examining His text we will note the fact that three-fourths of the human family today are heathen in the most absolute sense of the word and many of the other fourth are heathen in a truthful sense. Why do they not see the grace of God in Christ? St. Paul answers, "Because the god of this world hath blinded their minds," because "darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people" (II Corinthians iv, 4; Isaiah ix, 2).

But why does God not scatter the darkness and open all blind eyes and unstop the deaf ears? We answer, because, although He has promised to do these very things, His due time for their accomplishment is not yet come.

He merely calls His elect during this dark time, requiring them to prove their worthiness by walking faithfully in the dark: "We walk by faith and not by sight."

With the completion of the elect Church at the coming of the Redeemer—after the marriage, when she will be the Bride—then both Bridegroom and Bride will shine forth in glory, scattering all the darkness, ignorance and superstition of the world. Satan, the Prince of Darkness, will be bound and every evil thing shall be restrained and the light of the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the earth; all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. What will be the result? God's Word answers, that then "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God."

Brother Wesley's Proof Text

Brother Wesley's loving heart found and tightly grasped the declaration, "And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come; and let him that heareth say, Come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (Revelation xlii, 17). This text, however, belongs to the coming Age, to the time when Messiah shall reign: "For He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet" (I Corinthians xv, 25-29). There is no Bride yet to say, "Come."

We are glad of this, glad that it is still possible for us to become members of that Bride class which must "make herself ready" for the marriage and be forever united to the Lord as His Bride at His second coming. Then by the marriage she will become the Redeemer's joint-heir to glory, honor and immortality in the Kingdom. Then she, in co-operation with the Spirit of the Lord, will say, "Come," to whosoever wills to come of Adam's race. Everyone will say, "Come; there will be a world wide invitation. All the blind eyes shall be opened to see the waters of life; all the deaf ears shall be unstopped to hear of the gracious favor of God's love in Christ.

But as there is no Bride yet to say, "Come," neither is there any "river of the water of life" yet to invite them to. There will be no such river until after the establishment of the Kingdom for which the Master taught us to pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Jesus explains that in the present time His followers do not go to the rivers of the water of life to drink; but, on the contrary, he says, "The water that I shall give him will be in him, a well of water springing up unto everlasting life" (John iv, 14).

Twelve Years Since Cured

WELL YET

September 29, 1910.
Dr. Carey Med. Corporation,
Elmira, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—I wish you to know the history of my case and the remarkable results of the treatment of your Dr. Carey and the effect of his wonderful remedy MARSH ROOT, so that you can publish to the world in general this knowledge, thereby enabling any one suffering from a similar disease from which I was a victim, may know that a positive cure is within their reach.

About twelve years ago I was taken with a very severe attack of Diabetes. I suffered for over a solid year during which time I was attended by five of six of the best physicians I could get, but in spite of their effort, I got worse under their treatment until it was necessary to call a counsel of four physicians and they reported to my wife that there was positively no help and that I could not live through the night; in fact they gave me up to die.

A friend of my wife, a Mrs. Owens, who had been cured by Dr. Carey and from this same trouble, Diabetes, told my wife of her remarkable recovery and advised her to employ Dr. Carey, and as the last resort he was called. Inside of two weeks I was out of my bed and working, instead of being under the ground, as all of my friends and doctors, who had attended me, stated that I would be. I want to state right here that I was so bad that I would pass over one gallon of water per night. I make this statement so that everybody can understand and appreciate the misery I was in.

Over twelve years have passed and I have never had a re-occurrence of this trouble; am perfectly well and healthy with the exception of my lameness, which I expect to always have; but even that is getting better. To perform this miraculous cure Dr. Daniel G. Carey used his wonderful remedy, MARSH ROOT prescription No. 777.

It is unnecessary to say that I cheerfully and heartily recommend and endorse Dr. Carey and his marvelous medicines to any sufferer from Kidney troubles of any kind. I am ready at all times to testify to the truth of the foregoing and to answer any communication regarding same. You may use my testimonial in any way that you wish. Very truly yours, lem, which will then come to, or be established in, the earth—not a literal city, but, better, a symbolical one, of the Kingdom. It will be from under the Throne of that New Jerusalem, the Messianic Kingdom, that the "river of the water of life" will flow, clear as crystal." On either bank of the symbolical river will be trees of life, whose leaves will be for the healing of the nations. Then will be their "due time" to come to a knowledge of the Truth that God loved them and did not predestinate them to eternal torture, not to purgatorial suffering, but sent His Son to die for them—to pay their death penalty and thus to make possible their restitution to Divine favor (Acts iii, 19-21) and to all the earthly blessings, privileges and rights originally given to Father Adam—lost by his disobedience and redeemed at Calvary.

My dear friends, here we have the grandest and broadest Free Grace possible to be imagined, in connection with our Heavenly Father and His great salvation provided in Christ. As every creature shares in Father Adam's imperfection and dying conditions, so each one is to share in the merit of Christ's righteousness and sacrificial death; it shall be "testified to all in due time." There will be stripes, lessons, instructions, but they will all be corrective—with a view to the reformation and the regeneration of Adam and his race as human beings—not as spirit beings, not as angels; Adam and his race never were such. Only the Church has been begotten of the Holy Spirit to a spirit nature; only the Church will share in the resurrection to spirit conditions and be thus "like unto the angels."

This is Not Universalism
These two salvations, now of the elect, and during Messiah's reign of the non-elect, do not imply a universal salvation of our race, but merely a universal opportunity for everlasting life. The Scriptures most clearly teach a Second Death, like the first death, except that none will be redeemed from the Second Death, and none will be resurrected from it. It therefore will be, as St. Paul declares, an "everlasting destruction" (II Thessalonians i, 9). As St. Peter declares, the "wicked sinners against light and knowledge will perish, "like natural brute beasts."

The lessons from these great truths of the Bible are powerful. They make plain to us that none can hope to be of the heavenly class, of the Bride of Christ, except such as enter the strait gate and narrow way—the saints, the faithful unto death. They teach us also, in harmony with other Scriptures, that those who now either see not and hear not, or who see and hear imperfectly, will miss this great "prize of our high calling." Nevertheless for these, heathen and others, God has provided more than they could have thought or asked—an opportunity for obtaining human perfection and a world-wide Eden—Paradise restored. It teaches, also, that every misstep, every failure to do our best, is costly—both to the world and to ourselves. To whatever extent the world demeans and degrades itself, it will have, in proportion, difficulty and stripes in connection with the possibilities and opportunities of recovery during Messiah's Kingdom.

Let us herald wide the story of the grace of God in Christ for every creature; let us show the love of God to all who have the eyes and ears of appreciation. There is no greater influence for righteousness than this—The love of God and the love of Christ constraineth us (II Corinthians v, 14). And in proportion as mankind receive the same their constraints toward righteousness increase. Thus, with clearer light upon our Father's Word, it is time for us all to cast aside the things of darkness and sectarianism which so long have separated the people of God from each other.

The Great Lesson of This
The lesson to the Church is gratitude, loyalty, faithfulness to Him who called her out of darkness to the high calling of joint-heirship with the Redeemer. "The Bride, the Lamb's Wife," is to make herself ready by putting on the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit and being renewed and transformed.

The lesson to the world yet is only to those who, to some extent, hear it—that God is Love, that His mercy has provided a great opportunity for restitution that is nigh at hand; and further, the lesson is that every good and every evil deed will make their impression upon human character and have to do with the stripes, corrections, etc., of the future. Misimproved opportunities in the present life, violations of conscience, etc., will bring their reasonable retribution in the life to come and make the ascent more tedious and the more difficult. On the contrary, every good endeavor and attainment of self-control will be that much of an assistance for the future, when "the Spirit and the Bride shall say, Come, and whosoever will may come and take the water of life freely" and obtain perfection and everlasting life.

I trust that true Christian unity upon the basis of Divine Truth expressed in the Bible will be the keynote of this Convention to its very close. I trust that every soul in attendance may be so warmed and cheered and vivified by the Truth and its spirit that, going to his home, the blessing may be extended in overflowing measure.

A Great Advantage to Working Men

J. A. Maple, 125 S. 7th St., Stenboville, O., says: "For years I suffered from weak kidneys and a severe bladder trouble. I learned of Foley Kidney Pills and their wonderful cures so I began taking them and sure enough I had as good results as any I heard about. My backache left me and to one of my business, expressman, that alone is a great advantage. My kidneys acted free and normal, and that saved me a lot of misery. It is now a pleasure to work where it used to be a misery. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me and have my highest praise." Ed. D. Heckerman.

The Indian Fight at Lampasas

In the September Sports Afield Captain Miller continues his interesting historical narrative of life with the Texas Rangers in the late sixties, giving vivid accounts of a brush with Comanches at Lampasas and of a desperate running fight with Mexican cavalry on the south bank of the Rio Grande, in which the entire command would have been wiped out, had it not been for the timely arrival of Lieut. Beale, U. S. A., with a squad of regulars. Other articles of especial interest are: A Fishing Trip to the Highlands of Ontario, Trout Fishing in the Big Horn Mountains, A Notable Indiana Bass Water, Big Game Hunting in British East Africa, Moose Hunting in Alaska, and a very able review of Theodore Roosevelt's African Game Trails—a work which, Prof. Allen tells us, will be read in days to come, when Africa is the garden of the world and her game animals but a memory. Chats Around the Camp Fire and a number of timely editorials complete a most interesting number. Your newsdealer can supply you; if not, send 15 cents to Sports Afield, 542 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

GOOD ROADS AND BREAKERS

State Is Removing "Thank You Mam's" From Old Pike.

To those who still think that we cannot get along without the breaker, it would be of value to go over the work now being done on the Pike under State Supervision.

One of the places in which it was supposed by quite a few people that we would have to keep the breaker is on the hill leading from Schellsburg to the cemetery. Following the first day's work on this part of the road I walked up this hill last evening. All the work so far done has been to cut out every breaker, built with so much labor by our supervisors and attended with so much pain to the traveler. The road is now perfectly level.

If those who are clinging to a worn-out tradition will follow the work done on the Pike they will quickly find out why the County Judges have been ordering supervisors to take out breakers and fine them for not doing so.

One of the contentions made this spring was that several large breakers west of the crest of Chestnut Ridge could not be dispensed with. Today the gang is at work dispensing with them as fast as pick and shovel and wheelbarrow will do the work.

It is time that we stop theorizing and clinging to a dead past for models. We are in an age of progress, of scientific extension, and our road making should keep step with the progress in other directions. Of course that is not going to occur until road makers drop fool theories and get hold of facts that have resulted from the patient research of science.

Anniversary

The Church of God at Saxton held its seventieth anniversary on Sunday. The pastor was assisted by Revs. Shoop, Wenger and Staub. The music was rendered by the choir, in charge of J. R. Kelley. The Chamberlain Male Chorus gave several good selections and Miss Elizabeth Miller rendered several fine solos. The ordinance meeting, held in the evening, was one of the largest and most impressive in the history of the church. At the close of this service, J. G. Snyder of Altoona called the pastor, Rev. F. W. McGuire, to the front of the church and, on behalf of the church at Altoona, presented him with a beautiful bouquet of carnations. This is the closing part of his eighth year as pastor of this church, and both the church and pastor highly appreciated this gift on the part of Altoona friends.

This anniversary service will be continued at Coaldale during this week. Services at 7:30 each evening and three services on Sunday. The pastor will be assisted by Revs. Staub, Wenger, Snavely and Fleegal. Rev. Fleegal will preach at Saxton, September 10, at 7:30 p. m.; the pastor will preach at Coalmont, September 16, at 7 p. m.
